

NOT everyone is feeling the pinch. A Polish aristocrat who hired a private jet to fly from the South of France to Brazil had to make an emergency detour because her dog, a pampered pooch called Daphne, was caught short. The pilot had to make an unscheduled landing in Montreal, Canada, where Daphne, a husky, disembarked to do her business on grass near the terminal. The aircraft operator, exclusive private jet company Avolus, reckons the extra landing fees, flight time and fuel clocked up another £30,000 on the bill.

